Explanatory notes

The Index shows the average score of the combined 40 indicators. The Arab Index shows the average score for the indexes of the eight countries studied. The Country index shows the overall score for each country.

Values are divided by colors: yellow for strong and accountable public institutions, blue for respect for rights and freedoms, etc. The indicators of each value are divided in two categories: means in darker shades of the designated color and practices in a lighter shade of the same color. The index, rank, index by value, and index by type are colored in red.

Sequence of indicator numbering in the chart differs from the sequence in the text. In this sheet, indicators' numbers are sorted under the four values rather than by means and practices (as in text). For example, under "strong and accountable public institutions," indicator number (3) is followed by indicator number (11) because the former falls into the category of means and the latter falls into the category of practices. When moving to the second value, "respect for rights and freedoms", we start with indicators 4-7 since these are the indicators of means, then switch to 21-29 since those are indicators of practices, and so on.

Four indicators were suspended due to unavailability or insufficiently reliable data.

"0" means the score for that indicator is zero. An empty cell indicates no data was available.
